

THE CINCINNATI NEWS.

SEMI-WEEKLY.

VOL. II.

PARIS, BOURBON COUNTY, KENTUCKY: TUESDAY, MAY 22, 1883.

NO. 129.

Set out your plans.
The last snow of the season fell here last night.

Knott men are more plentiful now than before the convention.

CLAY LEE, banker of Owingsville, died Tuesday last, of consumption.

POKE KNOTT, ye Jones men; only the truly good shall shall be rewarded.

MICK FALLON held the lucky number (186) which drew the watch at Nesbitt's.

Now the merchants will all get mad at W. H. Ingels & Co. See the figures of their advertisement.

The marriage of Miss Annie Terry, of this city, to Wm. Warren, of Lexington, will take place to day.

Mrs. J. W. NEWELL cured her old rooster of the scarlet fever, with Wizard oil, salts and potent oil.

The City authorities have paid $57.13 to the Northern Bank being a balance on a note for $3,000 bearing interest at eight per cent.

P. LORILLARD & Co.'s agents were among us yesterday, distributing samples of their fine Climax chewing tobacco and pamphlets.

ALLEN SPAINOS, the well-known watering place on the Knoxville branch of the L. & N. railroad, was partially burned Friday night.

The wife of James Frazer, colored barber of this place, got raked off her horse by a projecting limb near Buddies Mill, and had her face severely cut by the fall.

SHERIFF ROGERS, of Fayette, came down here Sunday and arrested a colored laborer on the K. C. extension, for outraging a small girl in Fayette county last week.

HOLLADAY TALBOT, of North Middle-town, pleaded guilty to carrying concealed weapon in Judge Turney's court yesterday day, and was fined $25 and sentenced to ten days in jail.

JUDGE B. F. BOCKNER will resign his charge on the bench of this judicial district after the present session of Circuit court in Fayette, and will resume the practice of law.

IF HENRY REMAN, one of the thieves who burglarized a freight car here a few nights ago, was arrested in Cincinnati by some Covington detectives and was brought here for trial yesterday.

The boys of the City School and of Prof. Yerkes' school will play three games of base ball, to-day, to-morrow and Friday. Two best out of three winning the game money and a ball and bat.

Hiram Carpenter, of this precinct, sold nine hogsheads of tobacco in Louisville last week at $20.85, and one in Cincinnati for $27.25—the latter being the highest price paid this season for Bluegrass tobacco.

COL. GEORGE O'NEAL, of Paris, father of Mrs. George Hawk, of this city, and one of the best known and most urbane gentlemen in Ohio: is to be a candidate for Doorkeeper of the next Kentucky Senate.—Cynthiana Democrat.

The following knights of Pythias are in attendance of the Grand Conclave at Grand Lodge of Ohio: A. J. Lovely, Albert Adair, J. G. Hamly, Jno. A. Hanly, Andrew Gutreid, Jas. Short, W. Newhall, H. Fuhrman, Frank Webb.

TERRIFIC storms have occurred this week in Missouri, Ohio and Kentucky. Hail stones fell in Ohio, measuring nine inches in circumference. A portion of Kansas city was completely destroyed—loss over $100,000 and great loss of life. Empire, Kentucky, in Trigg county, was totally swept away.

It is really a feast for the eye to note the beautiful effects of the wall hangings this spring. They are not as gorgeous in coloring as those of last year, but touched here and there with pale pink, delicate blue, and much elaborate gilding. Rooms so adorned are no longer unfurnished, but lighted with warm bright tints which seem to permeate the very atmosphere. Indeed, never before has there been so much of the artistic and so little in the way of wall hangings as are seen at present.

SATURDAY night at City Marshal Merriam was clearing the obstructed sidewalk of Shinnar's block, he struck a stubborn colored man over the head with his cane. This caused him to throw a brick with such violence at the marshal's head, that it crumbled in pieces when it struck the brick wall of a house. It barely missed the marshal, who fired several shots, one of which took effect in the thigh, causing a slight wound. The wounded man is a laborer on the K. C. extension, and escaped.

The Killing at Millersburg.

Sunday night at about 8 o'clock, the town marshal, John Bogle, arrested Oscar Pollock, a young colored man about 20 years of age, for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and all alone, took him to the cage in the dark outskirts of the town, followed at some distance by some of the colored associates of Pollock, whose presence encouraged him to resist being put in the cage. In the marshal's effort to put him in by force, Pollock knocked him down; Bogle attempted to rise, was grabbed around the neck by Pollock, who was proceeding to bruise him in a most fearful style, when Bogle in his stooped over and lunged-up position drew a British bull dog self-loading revolver of 41 caliber, and fired under his left arm five shots in quick succession, four of them taking effect in various parts of Pollock's body, one of which was through the head, and killed him instantly.

Pollock was rather obstreperous when drunk, and but a short time ago when on a spree, threw his hat to the pavement, and exclaimed that if anybody would follow him, he would clean out the town by killing all the men, women and children and burning the town.

Cargyle had been recently re-elected and sworn in as marshal, and had been quite a forbearing one during his previous term of office, and only took to desperate means in this case in self-defense. His left eye was fearfully blackened and bruised, as well as the back of the head severely pumpled, and his clothes badly torn.

During his previous reign as marshal, a rough element both black and white, completely averted him as marshal, and the reign of terror ran free up to Saturday night when a colored festive broke up at Bryan's hall about 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

After the killing Sunday night, the colored element became much enraged, and a number of desperadoes came in from Shiptown armed with guns and pistols, and threatened mob law, but constable Savage deputized a guard of twenty-five men, who satily guarded the prison through the night.

Cargyle was admitted to bail in $750 yesterday, and will have his examining trial to-morrow.

As accomplished tramp pausing under the aliases of Collins, Caldwell and several others, claiming aristocratic parentage in South Carolina, was caught up with sleazy by Dr. Keller in the Mayor's office Friday, while in the act of receiving money from his wealthy parents in South Carolina. He bitterly denied having ever met Dr. Keller, and hurriedly proceeded in the direction of Prof. Young's college, where he alleged that he would prove by a certificate from Prof. Young that he had never been met by the Dr. at that place. Cargyle has never returned. He is a cultivated scoundrel, and generally works on the preachers of the various towns for letters of sympathy and introduction.

Last Monday week while the track layers on the K. C. were at work near Miller's Mill, in Clark county, they had occasion to roll a large boulder down the hill in order to get out of their way. It struck William Parnell, to whom such force as to break through the wall seriously frightening Mrs. Martin, causing her to jump from her sick bed and to run out doors. The excitement threw her into a fever from which she died two days after. Mr. Martin will be the one to suffer from the heavy damages. The deceased leaves a babe only a few days old and several other children of tender age. It is a very sad case indeed.—[Clark County Democrat.

We have on our table the Farmers' Home, published at Dayton, Ohio, containing an illustrated poem "An Ill Omen" by Miss Carrie Allen, of Bonifant College, and a letter from Miss Frankie Barlow, also a student of the same college, discussing the question: "Was Mary Queen of Scots connected with the murder of her husband Lord Darnley?" Both the poem and the letter are worthy efforts that even the older and experienced writers might be proud of. They are worthy of space in any paper wherever published, and we are proud that Bourbon can claim two such brilliant writers. Our limited space prevents us reproducing them.

This proposition to subscribe $100,000 for the right of way of the Paris, Georgetown and Frankfort railroad, carried Saturday, by 752 majority in the county. Majorities for:—Paris, 755, Centerville, 85, Flat Rock, 7, North Middletown, 224, Ainsworth—Millersburg, 76, Hutchinson, 90, Riddles Mill, 91, Clintonville, 67. The majority of the county of the vote of the city of Paris, is about 200.

Victory Over The Devil.

The Rev. Geo. O. Barnes of Kentucky, now preaching in Hoxton Hall, London, came near having a Democratic convention kick on his hands when he plunged into the gospel in his own peculiar way in trying to get a man out of the old orthodox mudhole, who arose and announced a text, and desired it expounded. He says:

"This awakened resentment in some; one woman, very red in the face, spoke right out in opposition; others looked strong resentment, and several walked indignantly out. The devil fairly roared, friends looked wild and scared, and for a time it looked like a regular 'smash up.' The Lord kept me in 'perfect peace,' knowing I was in the right; and when, after my sermon, 27 confessed the dear name of Jesus—some of them very notable cases—and these were followed by the 28th in the person of my text man declaring himself saved forever by grace, the tide of battle turned and the red field was won." Praise the Lord for giving the victory!"
